Meet Mylan, an Imagineerz counselor - every morning she wore magnificent costumes and a big bright smile as she entered a land filled with cheering kids and crazy cool projects. She learnt a thing or two about herself and a whole lot about how to get children to think positive and believe in themselves. And when she did, she saw a wondrous world where children were unstoppable.

At the end of that summer, Mylan walked home holding a camper's project with a note. 'This roller coaster is for you, Mylan, I am an Imagineer, I figured out how to make another on my own'. Mylan smiled proudly, "I made a positive change in how a little boy thinks of himself'.

Wish that were your story? Feeling valued, enriched and proud at the end of summer? Then read on.

How you will rock it ...

- Collaborate and plan with your team (to ensure children walk out everyday thinking "yes, i can!").
- Lead your campers (through creative pursuits, play rehearsals and impromptu spy missions).
- Communicate with parents (in English and/or any secret language you develop with the kids).
- Do whatever else it takes (to make camp a magical place for campers and co-workers).

Have you got it?

Your enthusiasm can light up a school, you have an undefeatable "I can!" spirit that would inspire a rock, and a work ethic that makes your co-workers root for you everyday. Most importantly, if you are raring every morning to go play with the kids and can't wait to tell parents all about their day at nick-up, you got it!

The icing on the cake...

- A passion for/experience with "making", performing arts, and/or outdoor games and sports.
- At least 6 months experience working with kids in a group setting.
- Previous experience in an all day summer camp.
