Course Description

From the SJSU Catalog: Treatment of essentials of U.S. and California government. Satisfies the American Institutions requirements in U.S. Constitution (US2) and California Government (US3), and the Core GE requirement in Social Sciences (D3).

From the SJSU GE Guidelines (S14-5): This course examines alternative interpretations of historical events and political processes that have shaped the social, economic and political system in the United States. This course will provide a multicultural framework for thinking about the choices and options available to individuals and groups in their social, economic and political relations. The focus of the course is the growth of a multicultural society and the interactions, including cooperation and conflict, as these many and varied peoples have dealt with social, economic and political issues.

From this section of POLS 15:

Students in this class will learn to analyze the foundations of American government, including the Constitution and Bill of Rights. Students will develop an understanding of the separation of powers, and the responsibilities of the legislative, executive, and judicial branches. Students will be able to write about and distinguish between key concepts and controversies in understandings of federalism, republicanism, liberalism, and democracy. We will focus on political institutions, political processes, political change, and public policy as we learn to analyze federal, state, and local issues in the American political system and to examine the meaning of American citizenship.

Course Format

This is a fully online course. All of your work in this course will be submitted using Canvas. You will need to have regular access to a computer and a stable internet connection. You may be able to rent equipment on campus. Please reach out if you need resources.

Learning Outcomes

GE Learning Outcomes (GELO) Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to: GELO 1 (US2): explain how political decisions are made, their consequences for individuals and society, and how individuals and groups may affect the decision-making process. As students analyze the meaning and content of the democratic process as it has evolved in the United States and California, at a minimum, they should be able to describe: the foundations of the political system, including the evolution of the philosophies of the U.S. and California constitutions, political culture, separation of powers, bureaucracy, federalism, and relations among various levels of government. Students should also analyze the evolving institutions of government, including a study of the powers of the President, Congress, and the Judiciary; the links between the people and government, including participation and voting, political parties, interest/lobbying groups, and public opinion and socialization. Students should also analyze the rights and obligations of citizens, the tension between various freedoms of expression, including issues related to censorship and freedom of speech, due process and the maintenance of order, the efforts to end racial, gender and other forms of discriminatory practices in both the public and private sectors of society; and the operations of California government, including the similarities and differences between the California and U.S. Constitutions, the relationship between state and local government in California, the basic issues of California politics, and a careful assessment of the impact of demographic changes on the history and politics of the state and the nation. GELO 2 (US3): identify the tools of political action and collective decision making at the local, state, national and global level, and articulate the values and assumptions that inform their civic engagement. GELO 3 (D3): Place contemporary developments in cultural, historical, environmental, and spatial contexts. GELO 4 (D3): Identify the dynamics of ethnic, cultural, historical, environmental, and spatial contexts. GELO 5 (D3): Evaluate social science information, draw on different points of view, and formulate applications appropriate to contemporary social issues. GELO 6 (D3): Apply multidisciplinary material to a topic relevant to policy and social action at the local, national and international levels.

Department of Political Science Learning Outcomes

The Political Science Department has the following objectives for its students: Breadth: Students should possess a broad knowledge of the theory and methods of the various branches of the discipline. Application and Disciplinary Methods: Students should be able to formulate research questions, engage in systematic literature searches using primary and secondary sources, evaluate research studies, and critically analyze and interpret influential political texts. Students should be able to apply these techniques to identify, understand, and analyze domestic and international political issues and organizations. Communication Skills: Students should master basic competencies in oral and written communication skills and be able to apply these skills in the context of political science. This means communicating effectively about politics and/or public administration, public policy, and law. Citizenship: Students should acquire an understanding of the role of the citizen in local, state, national, and global contexts and appreciate the importance of lifelong participation in political processes.

Classroom Protocol

This is a fully online course so out interactions will take place virtually through discussion posts. Your responses to posts in the discussion board should always be respectful and professional. You can view but not download the lecture videos for this course and they remain protected by the instructor's copyright. Students are therefore prohibited by university policy (S12-7) from recording, distributing, or posting any part of these videos. Students who violate this policy can be referred to Student Conduct.

Political Science Departmental Writing Policy and SJSU Writing Center

Students of political science should develop the ability to write in clear, grammatical English. Spelling and grammar count! Students must take care that appropriate citations are used. Direct quotations must be so indicated with quotation marks and a specific reference to the page in the source from which it was taken. Failure to cite your sources constitutes academic misconduct which carries with it serious sanctions. A tutorial on citations is available at the library website at http://www.sjlibrary.org/services/literacy/info_comp/citing.htm.

For assistance with writing, please see me or visit the SJSU Writing Center located in Clark Hall, Suite 126. In addition to one-on-one tutoring services, the Writing Center also offers workshops every semester on a variety of writing topics. To make an appointment, visit the Writing Center website at <http://www.sjsu.edu/writingcenter>.
